MSMEs in Qatar should maximise Internet use to globalise business: Industry expert

Shanavaz: Online business is an unavoidable reality of today's business world.

By Peter Alagos
Business Reporter

Micro and small and medium-sized enterprises (MSMEs) and entrepreneurs in Qatar should maximise the use of the Internet to upscale and globalise their businesses in order to penetrate a much wider market, according to an industry expert.

By 2025, at least 45% of global businesses and startups are expected to be online, in Qatar, the Qatar National Vision 2030 has given "tremendous importance" to online business modules, according to Sign In Qatar CEO M P Shanavaz.

Citing government initiatives like the Digital Transformation of SMEs' programme of the Ministry of Transport and Communications (MoTC), which was designed to help SMEs transform faster towards technology adoption, Shanavaz said this "would be the key for their future success by increasing productivity and innovation."

"Online business is an unavoidable reality of today's business world. It is a very important decision that is taken by going over various processes of online business solutions, and it is developed especially tailored to each and every business' needs. Every entrepreneur today has to make their presence felt online one way or other," Shanavaz told Gulf Times yesterday.

He added: "MSMEs have not yet tapped in proper online business solutions. Their websites are very basic and many of them don't even have a website; they only have a page on any social media platform like Facebook, and very few have mobile Apps, no proper online business strategies, while few of the companies not even defined their objectives."

Sign In's market survey of the home-based business landscape in Qatar showed that "hundreds of SME owners and retailers are doing online business."

"We also noticed a large number of women, particularly housewives doing many online businesses like fashion clothing, accessories, and footwear, among others. We also met many people who are doing various types of business through different social media, especially WhatsApp and Instagram.

"And most of them have shown interest on how to take their business to a more professional level by having a proper website, payment gateway, and logistic arrangements, as well as funding and investment to expand their business and increase their reach to a global level," Shanavaz said.

According to Shanavaz, there is a huge opportunity for MSMEs to upscale their business "through customised and efficient online business solutions."

"The business should upgrade their presence to a functional level, which is interactive rather than only informational. Businesses need to use advance technologies like artificial intelligence, augmented realities, proximity marketing. Also, online strategy should now be a part of their overall business strategies," he stressed.

Siege fails to diminish Qatari market's appeal, says Sign in CEO

Training provider in Internet technologies, Sign in finds in Qatar a promising market

ASIF IQBAL
DOHA

THE unjust blockade on Qatar has failed to make any impact on the country's appeal as a business centre, but has opened new avenues for companies to tap the huge potential of the Qatari market, a top official of an IT firm has said.

"The blockade is an opportunity for everyone and we see tremendous opportunities in every sector. The economy has proved to be resilient and the favourable business policies are seeing more and more companies setting up their operations in Qatar," Chief Executive Officer and co-founder of 'Sign in' Shanawaz told reporters on Monday.

Despite the blockade, the Qatari market is still very attractive, he said.

"We are a new entrant to the local market and that proves our point that the blockade is not deterring companies from coming to Qatar."

Talking about his firm, Shanawaz said Sign in is an internet business training platform. He said the main area of focus of the company is the digital entrepreneurship development workshops, which aim to create more businesses that are successful across the world.

"We provide expert training on the opportunities that the internet offers in terms of growth and expansion of any business by launching it online. We also extend ongoing support and consulting to ensure the success of businesses," he said.

"Qatar has one of the best internet penetration rates in the world and this is an advantage that can be harnessed by the small and medium enterprises (SMEs) to completely re-new the way business is done,"

he added.

Shanawaz said the business world is changing fast with technology and customers, owing to the high penetration of internet, go online to buy products they need, learn about products and services and are connected to the business to share their reviews for other customers to see.

"This change is good for small and big businesses if they adapt to it. In addition, the businesses, which do not choose to be online in some way or the other, will be fatal for the business."

Shanawaz said his company will hold a workshop on June 30 in Doha for SMEs to give insights on the opportunities that users can grab by taking their businesses online and how to start one's own online business.

He said the 'Sign in' workshops are conducted by experts who have over a decade of experience in various online businesses.
